WEST VALLEY CITY, UTAH — September 26, 2016 — SilencerCo's CEO Joshua Waldron recently had the opportunity to meet with a prominent public figure of the 2016 presidential race: Donald Trump Jr.

Josh sat down with Mr. Trump to discuss the 2nd Amendment, the District of Columbia v. Heller case, how this election will affect the Supreme Court, and to get an up-close, personal look at what his father, presidential candidate Donald Trump, would stand for should he win the presidency.

It's no secret that Trump is a supporter of the 2nd Amendment, but his passion for and understanding of the matter may surprise you. "The 2nd Amendment is what our founding fathers thought of right after free speech and religion." Trump said, in his interview with Josh. "It wasn't an afterthought; it was created to protect our most basic and important rights."

It's also no secret that Hillary Clinton is not a supporter of 2nd Amendment rights, as made evident by her opinion regarding the results of the District of Columbia v. Heller case. "The Supreme Court said you have a right, to keep a firearm in your home." Trump said, recalling the District of Columbia v. Heller case. "[Hillary] said the Supreme Court got that wrong. That scares me as an American."

On discussing how this election will affect the Supreme Court, Trump voiced interesting insight on what losing a few Justices, who are currently statistically above the average age, would cause and how it would change the landscape of our country for generations.

Trump's decision to visit SilencerCo was simple. "I believe in American manufacturing," he said, "and I love the product." SilencerCo is the industry leader in manufacturing and selling firearm suppressors and accessories. Each product is made in West Valley City, Utah, using American-sourced raw materials.

SilencerCo believes we all must take a stand for what we believe in, and make our voices heard on November 8 to protect and preserve what we hold dear.
